TED STYLE TALK COMPETITION

The Department of Mathematics and Statistics successfully organized a TED Style Talk competition on 19th September 2025, aimed at providing a platform for students to share thought-provoking ideas and present insightful talks inspired by the iconic TED format. A total of 9 students participated in the event, showcasing their creativity, research skills, and public speaking abilities. The competition featured a diverse range of topics, merging mathematics, technology, and human values. The key topics chosen by the participants included: Artificial Intelligence and Ethical Concerns, Ethical Tech – Can Machines Have Morals?, Beauty of Mathematical Patterns in Nature, The Mathematics Behind Everyday Decisions, The Power of Habit: Small Changes, Big Results. Each presentation was marked by originality, depth, and relevance. The students displayed commendable confidence and fluency, delivering their talks with passion and clarity. The integration of visuals and real-life examples enhanced audience engagement. Dr. Yogeshwari Patil, SFC Coordinator at Sheth N.K.T.T. College, was invited as the judge for the event. She praised the students for their innovative thinking and emphasized the importance of interdisciplinary learning in today's time. Her feedback to participants was insightful and motivational. The competition concluded with appreciation and certificates for all participants. The event was an enriching experience, inspiring students to explore and communicate complex ideas in simple, impactful ways.
